Wants Investigation.

To the Editor of The Times-Dispatch:
Sir.—In your paper of the 15th I notice a mistake made by the officials of the Petersburg asylum in sending the remains of a patient to the wrong home, and I wish to ask that while there is so much investigation going on in all parts of our government, wouldn't it be well if our State did a little investigating into the management of her public institutions? Now, I know of a patient who reported to his family that he had plowed in that hottest weather in June. Think of a patient in a hospital being required to work in the field with the mercury ranging from 90 to 104 in the shade!

This same patient also reported having a fight and being beaten into sumission by the attendants, and that with the knowledge of the supervisor. Now this complaint was made by a poor unfortunate patient, whose word wouldn't be taken as legal evidence, but don't you think a little detective work would reveal a surprising condition of affairs and result in a world of good for the inmates?

QUERIES& ANSWERS

Possibly it mary be news to your friend to learn that Graham of Claverhouse, Viscount bundee, the hero of the ballad, "Bounie Dundee," was, with the possible exceptions of Robert the Bruce, Sir William Wallace, and James Earl of Douglas, the most famous warrior Scotland (possibly the land where more fighting has taken place than any other) has ever produced. As I have mentioned above, this is only one of your breaks, and it is a pity to publish misleading information, as there are still some people who are innocent enough to believe in the accuracy of the newspapers.

Our friend seems to belong to the vanguard of those reformers who purpose to omit the courtesies from their correspondence. Nevertheless, we should be very pleased to have him write once more and specify some single error which he has detected in the Query Column. We greatly hope and strongly expect that it would turn out to be much such a nidus equae, or mare's nest, as he has stumbled into on this occasion, and we trust that the examination of his next objection may, as this one should, add right considerably to the numbers of that faithful remnant who are still linnocent enough to believe in newspapers.

Lately some one asked, "Was there ever such a person as James Graham of Claverhouse prominent in Scottish history?" And to this the reply was "No," much as it would have been to the query whether Virginian annais celebrated a Robert Washington or a George E. Lee.

Our friend is in error in the notion that it would "be news" to us that there was a "Graham of Claverhouse in the correct spelling, by the way, is Grahame, or that he was Viscount Dundee, etc. We were quite aware of these interesting matters, but they had no sort of connection with the query in hand. We were aware, also, of a fact which, in turn, will evidently be "news" to our impetuous correspondent, the fact, namely, that Grahame of Claverhouse, Viscount Dundee, was named John. There was a distinguished James Grahame, known to fame as the Marquis of Montrose, but he was not "of Cla
